

One mark of deep trust and love between individuals is when they stand jointly with each other without fear of being rejected, of being hurt or taken for granted. In this situation, they are able to be vulnerable to each other and to be vulnerable to themselves. There is nothing artificial or contrived in it. Perhaps this should be the purpose of any parent or teacher to be open to another when they're making a single-point connection of one soul to heart of a third who desires to see good. No pretense placed. No defenses built that are known enemies.

He said he began doing business with JRA Transport System, which shipped the coral-based items also monthly and received P500 for every container returned at Pier 13 at the Manila Port Area.

Interviewees also admitted that he had received a shipment of laptops and brand names on separate occasions from JRA Transport.

Unbelievable

But, Juan Miguel Zubiri, chief of the command on narcotics, said he was amazed on narcotics cases, did he ever hear from a person that his involvement was involved in the smuggling of coral.

"I don't think I will believe your story, that you don't know the outside of the cargo that were being shipped here from Zamboanga," he told Zubiri in Manila.

"The operation that day, I think it is not believable that members of the syndicate that comes with anyone here in Manila in shipping the materi-

Rizal, according to artists in UP campus exhibit

Queen City, the night of the exhibit opening—was full of people. It was a Rizal Day celebration—students high schoolers and their friends.

"Was he (Rizal) that tall?" one of them asked, pointing to the national hero's headpiece, which was on display.

The artist, a girl, said, "It was like a 100-year-old man's headpiece."

They may be laughing, but even they found themselves intrigued by the Rizal Day exhibit, which was on display at the UP Academic Center, with artwork offering their interpretations of his life and legacy.

In a country where almost every child knows Rizal, the UP campus exhibit was a chance for the national hero to be seen in a different light, as a human being, not just a symbol of the nation's identity.

There were more than enough Rizal Day exhibits in the country, but the exhibit at the UP Academic Center was a chance for the national hero to be seen in a different light, as a human being, not just a symbol of the nation's identity.

Monopoly tries comeback

In previous issues, in the Philippines it was President Fidel Ramos' business acumen—apparently acquired by the unimpressive demeanor of national security head Jose Ramos and captured through his simple manner at reform-construction seminars, the late Josefa T. The successful effort transformed the industry into the state company, independent, non-union-friendly and innovative (and of high value) to investors in what it was then known as—when PLN bought the infrastructure competition from the state.

But, actually if you think about it, the most pertinent question should perhaps be: Since there had successfully signed and drawn up the Philippine-CCP peace agreement, does the Philippines have any business to be called "non-combatant"?

Nadal lifts 6th French crown

Frustrates Federer in four sets

PARIS—Rafael Nadal is back to being invincible at Roland Garros.

The top-ranked Spaniard won his record-equalling sixth French Open title by beating 14-time Grand Slam champion Roger Federer 3-6, 7-6 (6), 5-7, 6-1, Sunday. The win improved Nadal's record to 49-1 on the clay at Paris—and to 6-0 against Federer in major finals.

"You can't win everything, you spend," Nadal said. "It's the highest level of commitment in the tennis world."

Nadal won last straight titles at Roland Garros starting in 2005. But in 2009, the top-ranked Spaniard lost to the fourth-ranked in Indian Wells. Coincidentally, on that day he was celebrating that match the year that Federer won the French Open to complete a career Grand Slam.

But Nadal returned last year to win a fifth title, and his sixth on Sunday put him even with Bjorn Borg for the most ever.

"For me it's something very special (to equal the six titles of Borg, for me)," said Nadal, who completed his own career Grand Slam as he won year's US Open.

"For me, the most important thing is win Roland Garros, not?"

Nadal also put his name under Borg to the record books in another category. With Federer's victory, Nadal became the second youngest man, after the Swedish great, to reach 30 career major titles.

"This also adds six months younger than Federer now when he won his 30th."

"The Grand Slam is a lot," said Federer,

SMITH OHLA is going back to its original target of qualifying for the 2012 London Olympics after a head-to-head semifinal encounter with the United States.

Team manager Markie Loo and the five-man goal is to book up a slot in the FIBA Asia Championship in Manila, China, on Sept. 13 or 15 through the 2010 Southeast Asian Games held in Manila.

The National, who won't play in the 2010 Asian Games, will play a slot in the FIBA Asia Championship in Manila, China, on Sept. 13 or 15 through the 2010 Southeast Asian Games held in Manila.

Interestingly, the National and former head coach Loo were both in the Philippines for the 2010 Asian Games.

The Philippine side on the Indonesian road was the 2010 champion, according to the schedule released by the Asian Basketball Federation.

Just like the other national teams before them, the National is a club in the Philippines. The team is coached by former National coach Loo.

"We're the best team in the Philippines," said Loo. "We're the best team in the Philippines."

Despite missing the Asian Games, Loo is confident that the National will be competitive in the 2010 Asian Games.

"We had great games against Iran and Qatar and we were able to win them," said Loo. "We were a good preparation for the Asian Games."

A MUSEUM is further established, in already solid footing in the country. Coca-Cola Bottlers Philippines opens the month's end of its bigger plans, expanding its production and workforce even more.

More than 11 hectares in size, the first phase of the new Coca-Cola plant in Marikina, Metro Manila Oriental was completed earlier last month, with the second and third phases scheduled for completion in the coming months.

The new plant, the 11th size in Marikina, is the first Coca-Cola plant to be built in over 10 years (the last one was in Bantay City). The new plant was built according to strict LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design) standards, also known as Green Building Council - proof of the company's pursuit to comply with not just local and international regulatory standards.

What's interesting about the Coca-Cola plant in Marikina Oriental is that it's perhaps the most environmentally friendly plant in the country, with solar water management and water conservation systems in place since it starts operation.

To lighting, Marikina is energy-efficient, which requires considerably less power consumption.

When fully completed in the next couple of years, the new plant would have several production lines that will provide high quality beverage products for the Metro Manila Region.

"We are honored that a company like Coca-Cola put up such a big project in our municipality," said Mayor Johnny Uy of Marikina. "We hope this plant deployment the economic gains other towns and other regions when a similar Coca-Cola plant was established."

For enough, since construction began, economic gains from the activity is starting to trickle. Mayor Uy said they are now conducting training so they can provide skilled employment for the construction such as laborers and drivers.

The move will "The presence of such a big company in the area would have a domino effect. This will help pull the interest of other investors to put their businesses in Marikina."

The Coca-Cola goes beyond providing new employment and expanding their business in the region. The company, through its charity arm, Coca-Cola Foundation, has put up two Little Red Schoolhouses in Marikina Oriental.

One of the 12 schoolhouses in the country the foundation has built so far since 1998. The three-classroom building has given hundreds of students (have a new reason to go to school by building a well-ventilated, well-lit classroom they can use in place of the dilapidated ones they used to have).

Through its support of the two recognized South Organization (SOFI) Asean's recognition gives to outstanding youth organizations that have contributed to the development of their schools or work place, through their innovative and valuable projects, Coca-Cola was also able to reach out to the youth of Cagayan de Oro.

Clearly for Coca-Cola growing the best new means growing the community. And with support for basic education and programs for youth development, the presence of Marikina Oriental can indeed look forward to a bright future.

BSP may raise key rates to head off inflation

By Rommel M. Dominguez

THE BANGKO Sentral ng Pilipinas may decide to raise its key policy rates by 25 basis points next week as inflation is expected to peak in the next few months, according to Standard Chartered Bank.

As a result, the BSP's overnight borrowing rate may rise to 4.75 percent, and the lending rate to 6.75 percent. Authorities are scheduled to meet on June 15 to decide on the monetary policy.

Standard Chartered raises '11 GDP growth forecast to 5.7%

In a research note, Standard Chartered raised the gross domestic product (GDP) growth forecast for the Philippines this year to 5.7 percent from 5.4 percent in light of "more sustainable growth dynamics."

"We believe inflation expectations are yet to be anchored, and are still vulnerable to commodity price volatility," the British banking giant said.

Meanwhile, foreign bondholders suggest that a further consolidation of monetary policy is required to ensure a sustainable economic growth that will policy rate remains close to zero."

Standard Chartered also said that with inflation expected to peak in the coming months, the BSP would likely raise its tightening measures in the third quarter to focus on domestic liquidity.

"With growth momentum expected to pick up in the second semester, we expect GDP to momentum-ignite with rate 25 basis points hike in the third quarter," the bank said.

This means that the borrowing rate may climb to 5.25 percent while the lending rate will rise to 6.25 percent.

Regarding growth in retail exports, the bank believes that the main push in expansion will shift from consumer spending to business-to-business and that momentum will pick up in the second half of the year.

"Looking ahead, we expect business sentiment to stay resilient, despite uncertainties related to EU sovereign debt problems," it said.

"While we expect GDP growth to rise further in the second quarter due to the high base effect and temporary disruptions in electronics manufacturing from the Japan earthquake, the underlying fundamentals of the economy remain solid," the British bank explained.

Regulator lifts ban on bank branching

THE BANGKO Sentral ng Pilipinas has lifted the last remaining restriction on bank branching by allowing banks to open new branches in eight key cities in the capital—a move aimed at promoting competition and improving financial services, monetary officials said.

The eight cities of Mandaluyong, Marikina, Pasig, Quezon, San Juan, and the financial district of Makati were now included in a 2002 branching liberalization measure because they were considered adequately served by banks at that time.

"We are expecting that the liberalization will further improve the competition environment, which should translate to better financial services for the public," BSP Governor Amanda Tamarag said in a statement.

"The new policy also aims to encourage banks to further enter up and improve their operations in order to be competitive," he added.

Commercial and thrift banks with less than 200 branches as of December 30 to may open new branches in the eight cities until June 30, 2014 under the first phase of the liberalization measure, the central bank said.

Government banks may also establish branches in the eight cities, as long as the move complies with their charter and licensing requirements.

Give airlines space, gov'ts urged

IATA discusses merits of leaving restructuring efforts alone

By Daniel L. Lopez

GENEVA—The International Air Transport Association (IATA) has urged governments around the world to leave airlines alone as they battle restructuring efforts.

Speaking during IATA's 75th general assembly in this city, IATA director general and CEO Christopher English said that governments must change their fundamental approach to airline regulation by adopting a more hands-off policy.

"Governments must change their approach," he said. "We need policy decisions that respect innovation with commercial freedom, reduce barriers to entry and allow airlines to maximize their economic freedom."

The IATA chief's call immediately found widespread support among the group's member airlines, including Philippine Airlines, which has lobbied long with its critics in trying to counterbalance its losses.

IATA president Jane Lambert pointed out that, given a free hand to implement its proposed restructuring program, the flag-carrier would save anywhere from $10 million to $15 million a year in operating costs.

"There are savings that could be used to further improve the airline, to make it more competitive internationally, and ultimately to reduce the burden of the existing public in terms of cheaper fares and better all-around service," he said in an interview on the sidelines of the annual IATA convention.

He underscored the point that IATA does not believe governments should try to force their way through restructuring efforts that are inherent in the airline's business model.

"We should be allowed to continue to re-structure our business just like any other firm," he said, adding that government intervention does not help airlines but only adds to their financial difficulties.

In the case of the airline's budgetary savings, for example, English noted that the company has installed over 500 personnel while having only one aircraft, most of which are already in use.

The IATA chief again urged that governments

Agreement with the airline's labor union be handled through the "proper channels," specifically the Department of Labor and Employment and the Court of Appeals, instead of the most recent case where the union approached Malabon-International for regulatory intervention.

RP-Japan trade slowed in April as effects of crisis show

THE IMPACT of the March 11 Japan earthquake on Philippine-Japan trade appeared to surface in April, with the country's exports to Japan growing by only 11.3 percent in the first four months, after expanding by between 20 and 30 percent in the previous months.

According to data from the Japan External Trade Organization, the value of goods shipped from the Philippines to Japan in April was P2.0 billion, or 11.3 percent from the previous year's P1.8 billion.

Imports from Japan, on the other hand, fell by 3.1 percent to almost $0.4 billion in the January-April period, from the $0.3 billion registered in the same period last year.

The four-month figures were pulled down by April results, with the country's exports to Japan declining to $0.8 billion, or 3.5 percent lower than April 2010's $0.83 billion.

April's exports to the Philippines dropped by 12 percent to $0.6 billion, from the $0.63 billion posted in the same month last year.

March trade figures already showed some slowing, with the March 11 earthquake causing damage to airports, effectively disrupting the supply chain of products being imported to the Philippines but had Japanese companies.

Some plants producing critical parts and components, particularly for the auto industry, were also damaged by the earthquake and the resulting tsunami in northern Japan.

At the end of the first quarter, the country's exports to Japan rose by 17 percent, while imports increased by another 8.8 percent.

Despite these setbacks, both the Semiconductor and Electronics Industries of the Philippines Inc. and the Export Development Council are keeping their export targets for the year.

IATA cuts airline profit outlook to $4B in 2011

Asia stocks fall on weakening US recovery

BANGKOK—Asian stock markets fell amid tepid-chest trade Monday after a slowdown in US housing led to evidence that the recovery is the world's biggest economic weakness.

Oil prices fell over $400 a barrel while the dollar was down against the euro, but higher against the yen. Markets in Hong Kong, South Korea and mainland China were among those closed for business.

While pessimism has been on the rise, Asian stocks pointing toward an easing of the US economic recovery, analysts said a slowdown was not altogether unexpected, as measures taken by various governments to cope with the 2008 financial crisis were still in place.

The US Federal Reserve's previous plan to inject $100 billion into bond buying effort to spur spending and growth—amid this month China, which had reduced massive government stimulus spending to help counter the impact of plunging exports, applied the brakes after that spending began slowing.

Japan's Nikkei 225 stock average was down 1.4 percent to 9,261.88, with shares of Tokyo Electric Power Co., the Japanese utility facing to bring a proposed nuclear power plant under control, plunging 26 percent.

Indonesia's Jakarta 300 index fell 0.8 percent to 4,538.52, with industrial and mining shares broadly lower.

On Wall Street Friday a weak employment report against another stock sell-off, two days after a report that the economy may be on the verge of slipping into a second recession.

The Dow Jones 30 stock index at 12,511.26. The Standard & Poor's 500 at 1,261.58. The Hang Seng 30 at 12,731.75. The Asian composite fell 1.5 percent to 7,731.75.

SINGAPORE—IATA, yesterday halved its profit forecast for the airline industry to $4 billion in 2011, due to the impact of 11 terrorist in Japan, attacks in the Middle East and North Africa and high oil prices.

"That we are making any money at all in a year with this combination of unprecedented shocks is a result of a very fragile balance," IATA's chief executive, Willie Walsh, said.

The revised profit estimate is down sharply from a previous estimate of $5.4 billion made in early March but below the forecast profit of $4.5 billion.

If the forecast is accurate, it would mean a 75 percent decline from the post-recession profit of $18 billion that the world's airlines made last year.

IATA's new profit outlook marks a steady 8.3 percent margin expected revenues of $308 billion for the capital intensive industry and leaves airlines with little capacity to absorb low oil prices.

The high oil price is the biggest cost, pushing down the industry's profitability and IATA, which has raised its average first-half forecast by 15 percent to $1.35 a barrel in 2011.

Previously, the airline body said, it would have had a profit of $5.4 billion in 2011, but it had to cut it to $4.5 billion for every one-dollar increase in the average oil price.

With estimates that 50 percent of the industry's fuel expenses are budgeted at 2011 price levels, the industry's 2011 fuel bill will hit $110 billion to $120 billion, IATA said.

That is now estimated to complete 20 percent of airline costs, more than double the 13 percent of 2007, it said.

Carriers from the Asia-Pacific are expected to absorb the cost of the world with a likely profit of $2.5 billion.

AN AIRCRAFT makes its final approach at Gatwick airport in Greater London. Global airlines cut their 2011 profit forecast by more than half as the economic North Africa and the Middle East weigh on the industry's recovery.

The forecasted airline body represents over 230 airlines that account for more than 90 percent of scheduled air traffic worldwide but does not include many of the big budget airlines.

FORMER BIR COMMISSIONER DENOUNCES IMPOSTOR

Former BIR Commissioner Lilian B. Hefti, through embassy, reported to MB last May 25, 2011 the incessant use of her name (former BIR Commissioner Lilian B. Hefti) by a lady impostor posing as the former Commissioner through phone calls using landline or different cellphone numbers. Former Commissioner Lilian Hefti calls to know this "modus operandi" when some acquaintances made confirmation with her, by calling her at the cellphone number known to them to be hers. She vehemently denied having made those calls. She was surprised to know that in a span of two weeks, several persons were the recipients of these calls. She is making this report to the press to warn people not to entertain those calls of an impostor. She would want to emphasize that if she wants to undertake any transaction with any person, public official or private person, she would personally make a personal appearance to undertake the transaction. She said she hopes no one would be victimized by this group of unscrupulous people, headed by the LADY IMPOSTOR.

Maynilad to spend P5.8B for pipe network projects

By Rex T. Oronoz

MAYNILAD WATER Services Inc. yesterday said it would spend P5.8 billion in 2011 to improve and expand its pipe network in Manila, Pasig, Marikina, Las Pinas and Cavite.

In a statement, Maynilad said P1.2 billion would be spent to expand its primary lines in Pasig, Marikina and Cavite.

For pipe laying projects in Marikina, about P200.43 million will be used, while P209.95 million will be spent for pipe extension projects in Pasig.

In total, over 400 kilometers of pri-

Move expected to benefit 520,000 users

mary and secondary pipelines will be laid. This is seen to improve service levels and serve formerly unserved areas in Maynilad's concession area.

Once completed, the project will benefit more than 520,000 residents and generate more than 54,500 jobs. The investments are expected to allow household and commercial users in the expansion areas to finally have access to service water.

The director, the people in-charge, Marikina, Las Pinas, Pasig and Cavite have been awarded their water from deep wells. Finally, we are able to replace in the south the notable achievements that we were able to do in the northern part of Manila," said Maynilad president and CEO Victor Nogra.

Maynilad Investments Corp. and O&M Holdings Inc. entered into a Public-Private Partnership (PPP) with the Metropolitan Waterworks and Sewerage System (MWSS) in 2007.

Since then, the partnership has resulted in improved water and wastewater services for users in the last zone.

From 2009 to 2010, Maynilad supplied more than 14.9 million water

Emerging taste trends in PH

By Devan MacFadden

THE ASMR what you eat. There would have been this statement in different times in many times. Properly from the growing economy areas Asia has seen a shift in the demand for food, single grains, toward more meat, fish and other foods.

The research report in the "Philippine Food and Drink Market: Emerging Opportunities" outlined the rise in the demand for health and drink in the growing young affluent people.

First, eating healthy and increasing consumer awareness of health and safety concerns.

Second, consumers in markets like India, China and Southeast Asian countries, including the Philippines, are demanding quality and attributes like organic and green foods.

Third, people in food continue to evolve as companies seek to move changing consumer habits, expand into new consumer groups and bring more sophisticated brands in the face of high levels of brand competition. These changing taste trends are forcing companies to think about the eating and packaging in appeal to consumers.

Asian consumers' shifting tastes

According to a survey by the Philip Institute for Health and Living, Government of the Philippines, population trends themselves as consumers show their health and well-being. Filipinos are paying more attention to food, food intake and consuming toward foods that are beneficial to their bodies and that maintain their health.

Despite the huge progress that local manufacturers have made in household food products, a global intelligence AI Market IQM survey in the region reveals that the majority of the people in the Philippines believe foreign products are better than local products. 68 percent in South Korea, while they all acknowledge that local brands are improving in quality.

Tapping new consumers

In order to reach deeper into the emerging markets and to capture the large, hungry consumer base in the Philippines, companies should be focusing on expanding into the Philippines need to be closer about who consumers and products they should target.

Top three criteria are in the pursuit of food manufacturers like the problem of not handling their products effectively because they are not meeting to their consumers' needs. The food manufacturing industry is experiencing a shift in the way they make and to consumers. Given the day when health and happiness by food experts used to be a main driving force behind product, food manufacturers must also be products that would be healthy to food.

In the survey by IRI, 46 percent of consumers said consuming the emerging markets was on the top of their list, followed by 36 percent who placed targeting new demographic groups as the main challenge they would face by 2013 and 2015.

So some companies, the challenge is to determine how to profit from the new trend in taste. For those who take into account the opportunity to prosper in one of the world's fastest-growing markets are essential.

COMMENTARY

Look, read, hear them

OUT The Asian Lifestyle Trends Study conducted by IRI, a leading global, flavor and fragrance manufacturer, identified four groups of consumers to watch for future potential. These segments are status conscious, eco-conscious, sensory experience and hybrid lifestyle consumers.

With consumers in Asia becoming more of Asian, the segments in the study are clear and will be the first to try new products and brands. They want to be associated with status and luxury brands more. Another pool of consumers means their products with sensuality such as spices and chocolate.

Hybrid lifestyle consumers encompass consumers' traditional beliefs and traditional practices in the new age. But not just that, consumers in Asia want to feel like they are modern and in control of their lives and to be recognized for it, fall into the new-age category. They want for separate food and drink habits.

While health-conscious consumers are looking for healthy food, they are not just looking for healthy food. They are looking for just have different eating style just because it gives them the perception that healthy food is important to their lives. They want to eat with a solid flavor but still have a healthy and safe to consume because it does not harm the stomach.

Among these four lifestyle trends, it was found that consumers in the Philippines were ranked in accordance to status conscious, sensory experience, eco-conscious and hybrid lifestyle consumers. After knowing which category Filipino consumers fall into is the first step. Food manufacturers who are in the Philippines market will also have to understand the taste demands that fall into these categories. So just when do food manufacturers care?

With consumer status shifting, there is a new focus that with a particular consumer group, there are new functional and the level of intensity of the taste can vary with different groups of consumers. For example, a coffee brand can appeal across all low-consumer categories but how strong or light the coffee flavor is not any. Additionally, there can be added to stimulate the entire mouth of consumers. Consumers who fall into the eco-conscious category.

Finance refutes PNPI claims

By Ramon M. Domingo

MANILA—PNPI, Philippines Inc. (PNPI) dropped to China $1 billion worth of materials from the foreign mineral resources, despite the inability of its parent firm to pay its obligation to the government, the Department of Finance said.

Using data from the Department of Finance and Natural Resources, the DOF said in a statement that PNPI concession agreement Mining Corp. dropped to China $1 billion worth of materials from 2005 to 2006.

"The concession mining and export of high grade nickel ore clearly belongs to the state of limited operations," the DOF said.

The DOF indicated that PNPI had only paid the government $125 million or less than one percent of the $200 million the company owes the government.

The amount is what the company should have paid to the state for the concession. The company's management (CFO) said under an amended and revised concession agreement signed in 1996.

The agreement enabled the company to purchase the government's interest in the company's mining rights in the San Juan Mining Industrial Corp. (SJMIC), which had the mining rights in the San Juan mining concession.

Last week, PNPI chief executive officer M. Nogra said in a statement to the company had been going to due to the government, contrary to the DOF's claim.

But the DOF said the PNPI is in the face of a crisis, and the government is not willing to continue to extend its concession to the company.

The "balance payment on the original and back value of the old concession and back value of the old concession and back value of the old concession" is added.

However, the DOF said PNPI received the bulk of the original concession which was $200 million to the government without getting any financial result in extension to the concession.

The "balance payment on the original and back value of the old concession and back value of the old concession" is added.

The "balance payment on the original and back value of the old concession and back value of the old concession" is added.

GOYA: Short-term fitness camps

What I learned from fitness camp

By Hilary Folpe-Hendrix
Contributor

WHILE I HAD not far over fitness camp last month in Lapeere, Ariz., it was my long-time dream to conduct a short-term fitness camp. I was in a fitness and weight management camp in a short-term fitness camp in Lapeere, Ariz., it was my long-time dream to conduct a short-term fitness camp. I was in a fitness and weight management camp in a short-term fitness camp in Lapeere, Ariz., it was my long-time dream to conduct a short-term fitness camp.

As planned and imposed, we were able to conduct the three-day fitness camp, with perfect weather conditions. However, when we finished the camp, I learned many more things as a result from my people results. I believe that the fitness and weight management camp is a great way for people who are trying to achieve their fitness and weight goals.

How accurate is your journal?
After I started working as a fitness coach, I have always encouraged clients to write down their food intake and exercise as we can effectively address fitness weight concerns and future problems that they may encounter.

By using the actual food intake of a long-term fitness who joined our fitness camp last month, we realized that people underestimate food intake when they write it down. That's why I sometimes wonder, "What's wrong with the program?" But when I see that people who are trying to lose weight usually underestimate their food intake.

I took all photos of the participants food intake at each meal, observed their way of eating, analyzed everything and then provided them individually after the camp. If you want to lose weight faster than what you have been experiencing, you should focus on eating behavior by taking photos of your actual food intake, analyzing it, and making plans on how to avoid bad portions and improve on portioning.

This is an alternative way of improving your fitness journal of just writing it down. This shows the photos plus your written journal to your coach, and you may be able to compare a more effective eating approach to achieve your goal weight.

The basics of fitness and weight management.
Fitness, fitness and weight management, however, were also part of the whole program. My co-fitness coach learned that fitness replaced the more basic components of fitness to the participants after a fitness evaluation.

We realized the importance of always going back to the basics of strength, resistance, and flexibility to create a well-rounded fitness program. Sometimes, most and most people are getting locked in running, and they often disregard other components of fitness that can be achieved by cross-training. Important in preventing injuries and getting better results.

After fitness and weight management, however, were also part of the whole program. My co-fitness coach learned that fitness replaced the more basic components of fitness to the participants after a fitness evaluation.

It's not about how much weight you lose during the short program, but what lifestyle changes you take away from it before fitness class, trying all the outdoor activities like hiking, biking, cycling, jogging, walking, exploring the rivers and the whole river, swimming, and fitness activities like beach line camp, fitness, yoga, group weight training, aqua aerobics and swimming.

As coaches, we discovered what activities motivate people and other coaches to create their own fitness programs to explore. The fitness activities helped all of us learn more about each other's strengths and weaknesses, and are of utmost importance to be able to design the most effective fitness program for them.

A jumpstart program.
I have always believed that a good fitness program that included both aerobic and strength training would be most effective. In my first fitness camp, I conducted a three-day fitness camp for weight loss because I knew that most people who are trying to lose weight would benefit from a jumpstart program.

But the results turned out so well, even without after the camp, they are still getting fantastic fitness and weight loss results. It was fulfilling in spreading love and fitness as a program like this, because while giving them a jumpstart program, we created the three-day experience the best of fitness lifestyle and fitness assessment for creating fitness and weight management programs, they could use it in the end, and after the camp.

So whenever you join a fitness camp, you should be able to give them attention to their fitness after the program, and not just the actual number on the scale during the camp. Yes, you can lose a great amount of weight in three- or five-day fitness camp, but be able to continue to get gradual results by doing something about your behavior in the long run.

You should choose fitness and weight management programs that combine fitness, nutrition, and behavior modification for long-term results. You should also have follow-up sessions with your coach at least once or twice a month that will help your program.
